EXPLANATION OF THE SIGNS

EMPLOYED IN THE FRENCH-ENGLISH DICTIONARY

- | | | | |
|---|--|-----|--|
| — | Represents the repetition of the French word, répétition du mot français . | , | Or, ou . |
| = | Represents the repetition of the English word, répétition du mot anglais (1). | * | Elevated style, style soutenu . |
| † | Antiquated, vieilli . |  | Poetical language, style poétique . |
| ‡ | Little used, inusité . | † | Biblical style, religious expression, style biblique, expression religieuse . |
| | In the proper sense, au propre . | ◊ | Familiar style, style familier . |
| § | In the figurative sense, au figuré . | ○ | Trivial style, style trivial . |
| ↓ | General acceptation, acception générale . | ○ | Popular language, terme populaire . |
| √ | Irregular verb in English, verbe irrégulier en an- | ⊖ | Low expression, terme bas . |
| | | " " | Foreign term, mot étranger . |

- before final letters signifies that these letters are changed in the feminine into those that follow, either immediately or after the pronunciation : TROMPEU-R, SE, i. e. trompeur, in the masculine, and trompeuse, in the feminine.

e-(italic) in the French words of the nomenclature denotes that the e is not heard in the pronunciation.

N. P. When the signs, abbreviations, etc., precede the first number, they apply to all the senses of the word; when they follow a number, they are applicable to the acceptation of that number only. These signs placed after the English apply to the latter.

Prepositions in parentheses. — The French preposition used before a noun or pronoun is in small capitals, and the corresponding English one in italics; the French preposition used before a verb is in italics and the English one in Roman. Thus, at the word FACHÉ (DE, for; de, to), signifies that, before a noun or pronoun, de is used in French and for in English; être fâché de quelque chose, to be sorry for any thing; before a verb, de is used in French and to in English, or sometimes que with the following verb in the subjunctive mood : être fâché de voir quelque chose, to be sorry to see any thing; je suis fâché que ce soit ainsi, I am sorry it is so.

Irregular verbs in parentheses. — In the irregularities of the irregular verbs, in parentheses, the first word is the present participle, the second the past participle; in the other parts, the moods and tenses are marked. The parts that are not irregular are not given. As the imperfect of the indicative is derived from the present participle, the conditional from the future, and the imperfect of the subjunctive from the preterit of the indicative, they are omitted. This observation applies equally to the imperative. When at a verb the manner of conjugating it is not pointed out, the verb is regular; if ending in er, it is conjugated like parler, in ir like finir; in oir like recevoir; in re like rendre.

(1) = shews that the English word is the same as that which translates the French word marked thus (—) the first time it occurs in the paragraph; if the first time there is =, that signifies that the French word may be translated by all the English words of the various acceptations.
